an instrument for making observations beneath the surface of water; a glass vessel for containing water, eg one for holding plants; a finger bowl (obs); a tumbler; (wa'terglass) a concentrated and viscous solution of sodium or potassium silicate in water, used as adhesive, protective covering, etc, and (esp formerly) for preserving eggs; water god a deity presiding over a tract of water; water gong (music) the effect of dipping a vibrating gong into and raising it out of water to produce upward and downward glissandos; water gruel gruel made with water; anything insipid; water guard river, harbour or coast police; water hammer a wave of increased pressure travelling through water in a pipe caused by a sudden stoppage or change in the water flow; the concussion and noise so caused; water head the source, eg of a stream; the region where this is found; a dammed-up body of water, or its quantity, height or pressure; wa'ter-heater an apparatus for heating domestic water; water hemlock a poisonous plant, Cicuta virosa; any other plant of the same genus; water dropwort (qv); wa'terhen the gallinule or moorhen, or other bird of the rail genus; water hole a pool in which water has collected, eg a spring in a desert or a pool in the dried-up course of a river; water horse a water spirit like a horse; a kelpie; water hyacinth a tropical floating aquatic plant (Eichhornia crassipes) with bluish flowers, that grows in thick masses in ponds, etc; water ice sweetened fruit juice or purée diluted with water, frozen and served as a kind of ice cream, a sorbet; wa'tering-call a cavalry trumpet signal to water horses; wa'tering-can or -pot a vessel used for watering plants; wa'tering-cap (obs) a cavalryman's fatigue cap; wa'tering-hole a water hole, where animals go to drink; a place where humans seek (esp alcoholic) refreshment, a pub (facetious); wa'tering-house (obs) an inn or other place where horses are watered; wa'tering-place a place where water may be obtained; a place to which people resort to drink mineral water, or for bathing, etc; wa'tering-trough a trough from which horses and cattle drink; a trough between the rails containing water to be scooped up by locomotives; water jacket a casing containing water placed round eg the cylinder block of an internal-combustion engine to keep it cool (also water box); water jet. — adj (wa'ter-jet) operated by a jet of water. — water joint a joint in a pavement that is raised to prevent water lying in it; a joint in sheet-metal roofing forming a channel for rainwater; water jump a place where a jump across a stream, pool, ditch, etc, has to be made, eg in a steeplechase; water key (music) in brass instruments, a sprung lever that allows drainage of accumulated moisture; water leaf any plant of the genus Hydrophyllum or the family Hydrophyllaceae, N American herbs with sharply toothed leaves and cymose flowers; an ornament used in the capitals of columns, probably representing the leaf of some water plant (archit); water lemon a species of passion-flower, or its edible fruit; water lens a simple lens formed by placing a few drops of water in a vessel, eg a small brass cell with blackened sides and a glass bottom; water level the level formed by the surface of still water; an instrument in which water is used for establishing a horizontal line of sight; a water table (geol); a slightly inclined road to carry off water (mining); wa'terlily a name commonly given to the different species of Nymphaea and Nuphar, and also to other members of the family Nymphaeaceae (the three British species are the white waterlily Nymphaea alba, and the yellow waterlilies Nuphar luteum and Nuphar minimum, the latter being rare); wa'terline any of several lines on a ship to which it is submerged under different conditions of loading, eg the light waterline marking the depth when it is without cargo; any of certain lines on a vessel parallel with the water showing the contour of the hull at various heights (shipbuilding); the water level; the outline of a coast; a chain line in laid paper, one of the wider-spaced of the two sets of lines intersecting at right angles, visible by transmitted light (vertical in a folio or octavo page and horizontal in a quarto one). — vt wa'terlog to make (a boat, etc) unmanageable by flooding with water; to saturate with water so as to make heavy, inert or unfit for use, or so as to impede life or growth (also fig). — adj wa'terlogged. — water lot a piece or lot of ground that is under water; water main a large subterranean pipe supplying water; wa'terman a man who plies a boat for hire, a boatman, a ferryman; a good oarsman; a person whose job is to supply water, eg (hist) to cab horses or coach horses; an imaginary being living in water; wa'termanship oarsmanship; wa'termark the line of the greatest height to which water has risen; a tidemark; a ship's waterline; a distinguishing mark in paper, a design visible by transmitted light, made by the mould or the dandy roll. — vt to mark with a watermark; to impress as a watermark. — water meadow a meadow kept fertile by flooding from a stream; water measure a measurement used for goods such as coal, salt, etc sold on board ship, the bushel, etc being larger than the standard bushel, etc (hist); wa'termelon a plant (Citrullus vulgaris) of the cucumber family, of African origin, having a large, pulpy, pleasantly flavoured fruit; the fruit itself; water meter an instrument for measuring the quantity of water passing through a particular outlet; water milfoil see under milfoil; water mill a mill driven by water; water moccasin a poisonous snake of the southern United States; water mole the desman, a shrew-like aquatic animal; the duckbill or platypus; water monkey a round, narrow-necked, porous earthenware jar for holding drinking-water, used in hot climates (also monkey jar); water motor any water wheel or turbine, esp any small motor driven by water under pressure; water mouse the water vole; any mouse of the genus Hydromys (Austr); water music (hist) music performed, or composed for performance, during an excursion by water; water nixie a nixie; water nymph a nymph inhabiting water, esp a naiad of Greek mythology; water opossum the yapok, an amphibious opossum of S America; water ouzel the dipper, an aquatic songbird of the genus Cinclus; water parsnip any plant of the aquatic umbelliferous genus Sium, esp the skirret; wa'ter-parting a watershed or divide; water pepper a very acrid persicaria (Polygonum hydropiper) of wet places; water pipe a pipe for conveying water; a hookah; water pistol a weapon or toy for shooting a jet of water or other liquid; water plane a plane passing through any waterline of a ship; the plane of the surface of water; a canal on the level without locks (hist); a seaplane; water plant a plant that grows in water; water plantain a plant (Alisma plantago) having plantain-like leaves and clustered white or pink flowers; any other plant of the Alisma genus; water plate a plate having a double bottom enclosing a space for hot water, used to keep food warm; water poet a writer of doggerel verse (after John Taylor, 1580–1653, a writer of jingling verses, etc, who was for a time a Thames waterman and called himself 'the Water-poet'); water polo an aquatic ball game played by swimmers, seven a side; a similar game played by contestants in canoes; water pore (bot) a hydathode, a water-secreting organ; a madreporite, a sieve-like calcareous plate in certain echinoderms; water pot a pot or vessel for holding water; water potential (bot) a measure of the free energy of water in a solution, eg in a cell or soil sample, and hence of its tendency to move by diffusion, osmosis or in vapour form; water power the power of water, employed to move machinery, etc; a flow or fall of water which may be so used; wa'terpox varicella, ie chickenpox; water privilege the right to the use of water, esp for driving machinery; a place where this right may be exercised. — adj wa'terproof coated eg with rubber or plastic, so as to be impervious to water; so constructed as to exclude water. — n a material or an outer garment made impervious to water. — vt and vi to make or become impervious to water, esp through the process of coating with a solution. — wa'terproofing the process of making any substance impervious to water; the material with which this is done; water pump a pump for raising water; the eye (humorous); water purple the plant brooklime; wa'terquake a seismic disturbance affecting the sea; water rail the common rail (Rallus aquaticus) of Europe, a long-beaked wading marsh bird; water ram a hydraulic ram; water rat the popular name of the water vole; the American muskrat; a pirate; a sailor or boatman; water rate a rate or tax for the supply of water; water reactor a water-cooled nuclear reactor. — adj wa'ter-repell'ent (of a fabric, etc) treated so as not to absorb water. — adj wa'ter-resis'tant (treated so as to be) resistant to penetration by water. — water rice a tall aquatic grass, genus Zizania; water rug a kind of water dog, perh from rug[1] (Shakesp, Macbeth, III.1.94); water sail (naut) on square rigged ships, a fine-weather sail set below a lower studding-sail, almost touching the water; water sapphire (translating Fr saphir d'eau) an intense blue variety of cordierite used as a gemstone; water seal a seal formed by water in a trap; wa'tershed the line of high ground separating two river basins; a drainage or a catchment area (erron); a slope or structure down which water flows; a crucial point or dividing line between two phases, conditions, etc; water shoot a channel for the overflow of water; a water chute. — adj wa'ter-shot (rare) crossed by streams. — wa'terside the edge of a sea, lake, etc, a shore. — Also adj. — wa'ter-ski a water-planing ski used in wa'ter-skiing, the sport of being towed at speed on skis behind a motorboat. — Also vi. — prp wa'ter-skiing; pat and pap wa'ter-skied or wa'ter-ski'd. — wa'ter-skier; wa'tersmeet the confluence of two streams; water smoke water evaporating as visible mist; water snail (esp US) a name for the Archimedean screw (qv); water snake any of various kinds of snake (esp of genus Natrix) frequenting fresh water; wa'ter-softener a device or substance for removing the causes of hardness in water; water soldier an aquatic plant (Stratiotes aloides) with sword-like leaves and white flowers reminiscent of plumes of feathers, common in lakes and ditches in the east of England. — adj wa'ter-soluble soluble in water. — water souchy (sōō'chi or sōō'shi) fish served in the water in which it is boiled (Du waterzootje, from zootje boiling); water spaniel a spaniel bred to retrieve waterfowl, the Irish water spaniel having a liver-coloured coat; water spider an aquatic spider, esp Argyroneta aquatica, which has an underwater bell-shaped web inflated with air carried down in bubbles; water spirit a water sprite; water splash a shallow stream running across a road; water sports sports practised on or in the water; sexual arousal or gratification associated with urination (colloq); wa'terspout a pipe, etc from which water spouts; the spout of water; a torrential downpour of rain; a disturbance like a very small tornado, a revolving column of cloud, mist or spray; water spring (Bible) a spring; wa'ter-sprin'kle (Spenser) a spray of water; a sprinkle; water sprite a spirit inhabiting water. — adj wa'ter-standing (Shakesp) brimming with tears. — water starwort a water plant, genus Callitriche; wa'ter-strider any long-legged aquatic insect of the family Hydrobatidae; water supply the obtaining and distribution of water, eg to a community; the amount of water thus distributed; water table a moulding, esp in the string course of a building, designed to throw rainwater outwards so that it does not flow down the wall below (archit); the level below which fissures and pores in the strata are saturated with water (geol); water tap a tap or cock used for letting out water; water thermometer a thermometer filled with water instead of mercury, and used for showing the point at which water has its greatest density; water thief (Shakesp) a pirate; water thrush either of two species of American warbler (Seiurus motacilla or S. noveboracensis) with brownish backs and striped underparts, living near water; water thyme the waterweed anacharis. — adj wa'tertight so well-seated as not to admit water or let it escape; (of an argument, etc) such that no flaw, weakness or source of misinterpretation can be found in it. — watertight compartment a section of a ship's hull or other underwater structure so formed that water cannot enter it from any other part; a part, esp of one's thoughts or beliefs, shut off from the influence of other parts; wa'tertightness; water tortoise a terrapin or other aquatic tortoise, eg Pelomedusa subrufa; water torture torture using water, esp dripping it slowly on to the victim's forehead; water tower a tower containing tanks in which water is stored so that it may be delivered at sufficient pressure for distribution to an area; a vertical pipe supplied with water under high pressure, used in fire-fighting; water tunnel (aeronautics) a tunnel in which water is circulated instead of air to obtain a visual representation of flow; water twist a kind of cotton yarn, first made by the water frame; in spinning, more than the usual amount of twist; water vapour water in gaseous form, esp when evaporation has occurred at a temperature below boiling-point. — adj wa'ter-vas'cular relating to vessels in certain invertebrates which contain a mixture of water and a nutritive fluid; in echinoderms, relating to the system of coelomic canals (water-vascular system) associated with the tube feet and supplying fluid for their movement. — water vine a name for various plants yielding a refreshing watery sap; water violet a plant of the genus Hottonia of aquatic herbs with racemose flowers and crowded submerged leaves; water vole a large British vole, Arvicola amphibius, commonly known as the water rat; water wagon a wagon used to convey water; abstinence from alcohol, as in be or go on the water wagon (colloq); water wagtail a wagtail, esp the pied wagtail; water wave a wave of water; a wave in the hair made by setting it when wet. — vt (wa'ter-wave) to make such a wave in (hair). — wa'terway a series of pieces of timber, extending round a ship at the junction of the decks with the sides, having a groove connecting with the scuppers to carry off water; any channel for water; a stretch of navigable water; a route over, or by, water; wa'terweed any plant with very small flowers and leaves growing in ponds, etc, esp anacharis (qv); water wheel a wheel moved by water; an engine for raising water; water wings a wing-like inflated device that fits across the chest, or a pair of inflatable armbands, for keeping a non-swimmer, esp a child learning to swim, afloat in water; water witch a dowser; wa'terwork (usu in pl) any apparatus or plant by which water is supplied, eg to a town; (usu in pl) an ornamental fountain, cascade, etc (obs); fabric painted to look like and be used like tapestry (hist); tear-shedding, weeping (humorous); the urinary system (euphem). — adj wa'ter-worn worn by the action of water. — water yam a plant with farinaceous root-stock, the lattice leaf. — above water out of difficulties, esp financial; by water using water transport, by ship, boat, etc; cast someone's water (obs) to examine someone's urine to aid in the diagnosis of disease; high water and high-watermark see under high; hold water (of an argument, etc) to be correct or well-grounded, to bear examination; in deep water or waters in water too deep for safety; in trouble, difficulty or distress, esp of the financial kind; keep one's head above water to keep solvent; like water copiously; extravagantly, recklessly; like water off a duck's back (of a scolding, etc) having no effect, making no impression; low water and low- watermark see under low; make a hole in the water (slang) to drown oneself; make the mouth water to arouse a delightful feeling of anticipation or desire; make water (of a boat) to leak, take in water; make or pass water to urinate; of the first or purest water see water (n); pour oil on troubled waters to take measures to calm down a stormy state of affairs, from the effect of pouring oil on rough water; pour or throw cold water on or over to discourage by one's indifference or dismissiveness; still waters run deep a quiet exterior often conceals strong emotions, resolution, cunning, etc; test the water or waters to try to ascertain probable reaction or response before making a proposal, selling a product, etc; under water below the surface; water down (lit and fig) to dilute, make less strong, attenuate; water of crystallization or hydration the water present in hydrated compounds, which, when crystallized from solution in water, retain a definite amount of water; water of life spiritual refreshment; whisky, brandy, etc; water on the brain hydrocephalus; water on the knee an accumulation of serous fluid in the knee joint; water under the bridge experiences that are over and done with; past problems that have been forgotten or put down to experience. [OE wæter; cf Du water, Ger Wasser; cognate with Gr hydōr, L ūdus wet, unda a wave, Sans udan water]

Watergate wö'tər-gāt, n the US political scandal involving an attempted break-in at the Democratic Party headquarters (the Watergate building, Washington D.C.) in 1972 by agents employed by President Richard Nixon's re-election organization, and the subsequent attempted cover-up by senior White House officials who had approved the break-in; hence any similar political or public scandal, esp one involving corruption, or misuse of power; see also -gate.

Waterloo wö-tər-lōō', or wö', n a final defeat. — Waterloo cracker (obs) a kind of firework. — meet one's Waterloo to be finally and decisively defeated. [Waterloo, near Brussels, where Napoleon was finally defeated in 1815] waterman ... to ... watery. See under water.

Watling Street wot'ling strēt, n one of the great Roman highways of Britain, running from near London through St Albans to Wroxeter; often extended at either end to include the roads to Dover and Chester; loosely applied to other Roman roads; the Milky Way (obs). [OE Wæclinga strǣt the street of Wǣcel's people (of whom nothing is known); the OE name of St Albans was Wæclinga ceaster] wats. See under wit[1].

watt wot, n the practical and MKS unit of power, equal to a rate of working of one joule per second. — n watt'age an amount of power expressed in watts. — watt'-hour' a common unit of electrical energy, being the work done by one watt acting for one hour; watt'meter an instrument containing a series (current) and a shunt (voltage) coil whose combined torque produces a deflection of the needle that is a direct measure of the circuit power in watts. [James Watt (1736–1819)]

Watteau wot'ō, adj applied to articles or features of women's dress resembling those seen in the paintings of Antoine Watteau (1684–1721), as in Watteau bodice, one with a square opening at the neck and short sleeves. — adj Watt'eauish.

wattle[1] wot'l, n (collective sing or in pl) material for fences, roofs, etc, in the form of rods and branches, etc, either interwoven to form a network or loose; a hurdle (dialect); a twig or flexible rod (dialect); any of various Australian acacias; (perh a word of separate origin) the coloured fleshy excrescence under the throat of some birds, or a similar excrescence or process on any part of the head of a bird, fish, etc. — vt to bind with wattle or twigs; to form by plaiting twigs. — adj watt'led. — n watt'ling the act of making wattles by interweaving twigs, etc; wattlework, or the material for it. — watt'lebark the bark of various acacias, used for tanning; wattle bird or watt'lebird any of a number of honey-eaters of Australia that have ear wattles; watt'lework wickerwork. — wattle and daub or dab wattlework plastered with mud and used as a building material. [OE watul, watel; origin uncertain]

wattle[2] wot'l, (hist; Orkney and Shetland) n the obligation to entertain the foud on his annual journey, or a tax for which it was later commuted. [Perh Norw dialect veitla, from ON veizla entertainment]

waucht. See waught.

wauff. Variant of waff[1,2].

waugh[1] wö, interj expressing sorrow, anger, etc, usu attributed to N American Indians.

waugh[2]. See waff[3].

waught or waucht wöhht, (Scot) n a large draught. - - vt and vi to drink in large draughts. [Perh connected with quaff] wauk and waukmill. See waulk.

waukrife. Same as wakerife (see under wake[1]).

waul[1] or wawl wöl, vi to cry like a cat or a newborn baby. — Also n. — n and adj waul'ing or wawl'ing. [Imit] waul[2] or wawl wöl, (Scot; obs) vi to roll the eyes; (of the eyes) to roll. [OE wealwian to roll, wallow] waulk, walk or wauk wök, vt to full (cloth). — n waulk'er, walk'er or wauk'er a fuller of cloth. — waulk'ing-, walk'ing- or wauk'ing-song a song for singing while fulling cloth, specif one sung in Gaelic by Hebridean women, its beat setting or reflecting the work rhythm; waulk'mill, walk'mill or wauk'mill a fulling-mill. [Orig the same verb as walk[1] (qv)] waur, waurst. See war[2].

wave wāv, n a ridge on the surface of a liquid, esp of the sea; a surge, consisting of vibrating particles of liquid, moving across the surface of a body of liquid such as the sea (transverse wave), the vibrations of the individual particles being at right angles to the line of advance; a unit disturbance in any travelling system of vibrating particles such as a light wave (transverse wave) or a sound wave (longitudinal wave, the vibrations of the particles being in the direction of advance); an undulating or vibratory motion (eg as a signal), or sound; the sea, or other body of water (poetic); curved inequality of surface; a line or streak like a wave; an undulation; an undulating succession of curves in hair, or one of these; a movement of the raised hand expressing greeting, farewell etc; a swell or increase, normally followed by a subsidence or decline; any movement suggestive of a surge, esp one of a series or progression. — vi to move like a wave; to move backwards and forwards; to float or hover (obs); to flutter; to make a signal in this way; to move the raised hand in greeting, farewell, etc or as a signal or sign; to undulate; (of hair) to have a wave or waves, be full of waves; to waver, vacillate (obs). — vt to move backwards and forwards; to brandish; to flutter; to waft or beckon; to express by a wave; to direct, signal an instruction to, by a wave; to raise into inequalities of surface; to give an undulating appearance to (hair). — adj waved showing a wavelike form or outline; undulating; (of hair) artificially made to undulate; indented (heraldry); having on the margin a succession of curved segments or incisions. — adj wave'less. — n wave'let a little wave. — adj wave'like. — n and adj wā'ving. — wave'band (radio) a range of wavelengths occupied by transmission of a particular type; wave energy or power energy or power derived, by some means of conversion, from the movement of sea waves; wave equation (phys) a differential equation that describes the passage of harmonic waves through a medium; wave'form or wave'shape (phys) a graph showing variation of amplitude of electrical signal, or other wave, against time; wave'front (phys) in a propagating vibratory disturbance, the continuous locus of points which are in the same phase of vibration; wave function (phys) a mathematical equation representing the space and time variations in amplitude for a wave system; wave'guide (electronics) a hollow metal conductor, usu rectangular, within which very high-frequency energy can be transmitted efficiently; wave'length the distance between two successive similar points on an alternating wave, eg between successive maxima or between successive minima; the distance, measured radially from the source, between two successive points in free space at which an electromagnetic wave has the same phase; such a distance serving to identify radio waves from a particular transmitter (radio); wave mechanics (phys) the part of quantum mechanics dealing with the wave aspect of the behaviour of radiations; wave'meter an instrument for measuring wavelengths, directly or indirectly; wave motion undulatory movement; motion in waves, or according to the same laws; wave number (phys) in an electromagnetic wave, the reciprocal of the wavelength, ie the number of waves in unit distance; wave offering an ancient Jewish custom of moving the hands in succession towards the four points of the compass in presenting certain offerings, opp to the heave offering, in which the hands were only lifted up and lowered; wave-particle duality the circumstance that light and other electromagnetic radiation behave like a wave motion when being propagated and like particles when interacting with matter; wave power see wave energy; waveshape see waveform; wave theory (phys; esp hist) the theory that light or other radiation is transmitted in the form of waves; wave train a group of similar waves, of limited duration, produced by a single disturbance. — make waves to create a disturbance, make trouble; on the same wavelength as in tune with, having the same attitude of mind, background knowledge, etc; wave aside to dismiss (a suggestion, etc) as irrelevant or unimportant; wave down to signal to stop by waving; wave off to wave to (someone moving out of sight on departure) by way of farewell. [OE wafian to wave; cf ON vafra to waver; noun also an alteration of ME wage, wawe flood, wave] waveband ... to ... wavelike. See under wave.

wavellite wā'və-līt, n hydrated phosphate of aluminium, occurring commonly in flattened globular aggregates, showing a strongly developed internal radiating structure. [Dr William Wavel or Wavell, (died 1829) who discovered the mineral near Barnstaple] wavemeter. See under wave.

waver wā'vər, vi to move to and fro; to shake, be unsteady, be in danger of falling; to falter, show signs of giving way; to vacillate; to vary, change. — n wā'verer. — n and adj wā'vering. — adv wā'veringly in a wavering or irresolute manner. — n wā'veringness. — adj wā'very or wā'verous unsteady. [ON vafra to flicker]

WAVES or waves wāvz, n pl or sing (US) the women's reserve of the US navy. [*W*omen *A*ccepted for *V*oluntary *E*mergency *S*ervice] waveshape. See under wave.

waveson wāv'sən, (rare) n goods floating on the sea after a shipwreck. [Poss by analogy from Anglo-Fr floteson flotsam] wavey or wavy wā'vi, n the snow goose. [Cree] waving. See under wave.

wavy[1] wāvi adj (of hair) forming undulations, full of waves; (of a line, etc) describing a series of curves in alternating directions; like waves in shape or movement; curving, undulating; fluctuating, wavering. — adv wā'vily. — n wā'viness the state or quality of being wavy. — Wavy Navy the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve, so called from the undulating gold braid on officers' sleeves. [wave] wavy[2]. See wavey.

wyvern. Same as wivern.

X or x eks, n the twenty-fourth letter in the modern English alphabet, and twenty-first of the Roman alphabet, taken from the Chalcidian alphabet, and of the same form, though perhaps not the same origin, as Ionic and classical Greek chi (X, χ; pronounced k-h, and later hh); an object or symbol in the shape of the letter X. (X was used in Old English medially and finally as a variant for cs. In modern English, medially and finally, it has the value of ks, as in extinct and axe, and, medially only, of gz, as in exist, or ksh, as usu in luxury, or gzh, as in luxurious; (at the beginning of a word it is usu pronounced z, or, rarely, gz).

X symbol: (also x or x) the first variable, unknown or yet to be ascertained quantity or factor (algebra, etc); (as a Roman numeral) ten (X representing a thousand, X ten thousand); Christ (see also chi[1]), also used as an abbreviation, as in Xmas and Xian (Christian); a former category of cinema film to which persons under eighteen were not admitted (superseded by the desigation 18); used to indicate various other things, such as a choice on a ballot paper, an error on an examination paper, etc, or a kiss. — x-axis (math) in a graph: the horizontal axis along which the x-coordinate is plotted. See also y-axis; X'-body (bot) an inclusion in a plant-cell suffering from a virus disease; X'-chromosome a chromosome associated with sex-determination, usu occurring paired in the female zygote and cell, and alone in the male zygote and cell; X'-craft (hist) a British midget submarine; X'-factor that part of a serviceman's or servicewoman's pay intended as compensation for the disruptions and disadvantages of life in the armed forces; X'-generation another term for Generation X (qv under generation); x'-height (printing) the height of a lower-case x, used as a measure of the height of a typeface; X-inactivā'tion (biol) the inactivation of one or other X-chromosome in female mammalian cells, with repression of most of the genes on the chromosome; X'-particle a meson. — adj X'-rated of a film, in the former X category; graphically violent or sexually explicit in content, language, etc. — X-ray see separate entry.

x abbrev: ex (L, without), as in xd, ex dividend.

xanth- zanth- or xantho- zan'thō- or -tho'-, combining form denoting yellow. — n xan'than (zan'than) or xan'tham (also xanthan, or xantham, gum) a substance used as a thickening agent in food preparation. — n xan'thate a salt of xanthic acid. — n xanthein (zan'thē-in) a soluble yellow colouring matter present in flowers. — n xanthene (zan'thēn) a white crystalline compound of carbon, hydrogen and oxygen, from which are derived xanthene dyestuffs. — adj xan'thic of a yellow tint, esp as a description of flowers (esp bot); relating to xanthin or xanthine; designating xanthic acid, any of a series of addition compounds of an alcohol with carbon disulphide, esp ethyl-xanthic acid. — n xan'thin a name given to the insoluble yellow colouring matter found in various flowers; a yellow colouring-matter obtained from madder; (usu xan'thine) a white substance, structurally related to uric acid, found in muscle tissue, the liver and other organs, urine, etc, which leaves a lemon-yellow residue when evaporated with nitric acid. — n Xan'thium (Gr xanthion a plant used for dyeing the hair yellow) any of a small but widely distributed genus of composite plants whose fruits bear hooked prickles very troublesome to sheep and other animals. — n pl Xanthochroi (zan-thok'rō-ī; Gr chroā or chroiā skin) according to Huxley and other ethnologists, one of the five groups of human races, comprising those with fair hair and pale skin. — n xanthochroia (-thō-kroi'ə) yellowness of the skin. — adj xanthochrō'ic or xan'thochroid (-kroid; also used as n). — n xanthochroism (-thok'rō-izm) a condition in which all pigments other than yellows disappear, as in goldfish, or in which normal colouring is replaced by yellow. — adj xanthochroous (-thok'rō-əs) xanthochroic. — n xanthochrō'mia (med) any yellowish discoloration, esp of the cerebrospinal fluid. — n xanthoma (zan-thō'mə) a yellow tumour composed of fibrous tissue and of cells containing cholesterol ester, occurring on the skin (eg in diabetes) or on the sheaths of tendons, or in any tissue of the body: — pl xanthō'mas or xanthō'mata. — adj xanthō'matous. — adj xanthomelanous (zan-thō-mel'ə-nəs; Gr melas, -anos black) applied by Huxley to members of the human race with black hair and yellow or olive skins. — n xanthophyll (zan'thō-fil) $C_{40}H_{56}O_2$, one of the two yellow pigments present in the normal chlorophyll mixture of green plants. — n xanthop'sia the condition in which objects appear yellow to the observer, as in jaundice or after taking santonin. — n xanthop'terin or (rare) xanthop'terine (-in) a yellow pigment obtainable from the wings of yellow butterflies and the urine of mammals. — adj xanthous (zan'thəs) yellow. — n xanthoxyl (zan-thok'sil; Gr xylon wood) a plant of the genus Xanthoxylum of the Rutaceae, comprising over one hundred species, of which many are found in Brazil and the W Indies; in particular, either of two species known respectively as the prickly-ash and Hercules club; the dried bark of either of these two species. — n Xanthura (-thū'rə) or Xanthoura (-thōō'rə; Gr ourā tail) the former name of a genus of yellow-tailed American jays, now Cyanocorax. [Gr xanthos yellow]

Xanthian zan'thi-ən, adj relating to Xanthus, the capital of ancient Lycia in Asia Minor.

xanthic, xanthin, Xanthium, xantho-, etc. See under xanth-.

Xantippe zan-tip'i, n a scold or shrew. — Also Xanthippe (-thip'i). — (Shakesp in older editions, Zan'tippe or Zen'tippe). [Gr Xanthippē the wife of Socrates]

X-body, X-chromosome and X-craft. See under X (symbol).

xd abbrev: ex dividend, of a share price, etc, not including the next dividend to be paid.

Xe (chem) symbol: xenon.

xebec zē'bek, n a small three-masted ship used esp by the former pirates of Algiers. [Fr chebec, influenced by the Spanish spelling; perh from Turkish or Arabic]

Xema zē'mə, n a genus or subgenus of gulls. [Arbitrarily invented by Leach in 1819]

Xenarthra ... to ... xenium. See under xeno-.

xeno- zen-ō- or zi-no'-, or before a vowel xen- zen- or zēn-, combining form denoting: strange, foreign; a guest. — n Xenar'thra (Gr arthron a joint) a group of American edentates, including ant-eaters, sloths and armadillos, the dorsolumbar vertebrae of which are jointed in an unusual manner. — adj xenar'thral having additional facets on the dorsolumbar vertebrae. — n xē'nia (bot) the direct influence of pollen upon endosperm (explained by double fertilization) or upon the mother-plant of the embryo. — adj xenial (zē'ni-əl) of or concerning hospitality or relations with guests. — n xenium (zē'ni-əm) a present made to a guest or an ambassador; an offering, or a compulsory gift, to a ruler, the Church, etc: — pl xē'nia. — adj xenobiotic (-bī-ot'ik; biol, etc) denoting or relating to a substance foreign to or not rightly found in a body, biological system, etc. — n a xenobiotic substance. — n xen'ocryst (-krist) a crystal or mineral grain which has been taken in by magma during its upward flow. — n xenodochium (zen-ō-do-kī'əm; Gr docheion a receptacle) a building for the reception of strangers, eg a guest-house in a monastery. — n xenogamy (zen-og'ə-mi; Gr gamos marriage; bot) cross-fertilization. — n xenogenesis (zen-ō-jen'ə-sis; Gr genesis birth) the (imagined) generation of something altogether and permanently unlike the parent. — adj xenogenet'ic. — adj xenogenous

(zi-noj'i-nəs) due to an outside cause. — n xenogloss'ia (Gr glōssa tongue) in psychical research, a person's knowledge of a language which he or she has never learned. — n xen'ograft (biol) a graft from a member of a different species. — n xen'olith a fragment of rock of extraneous origin which has been incorporated in magma. — n xenomania (-mā'ni-ə; Gr maniā madness) an inordinate attachment to foreign things. — n xenomenia (-mē'ni-ə; Gr mēniaia menses) vicarious menstruation, in which, in the absence of normal menstruation, bleeding occurs at regular monthly intervals from other parts of the body (eg the nose). — adj xenomorphic (-mōr'fik; Gr morphē form; geol) allotriomorphic. — n xen'ophile a person who likes foreigners or foreign things. — n xen'ophobe (-fōb; Gr phobos fear) a person who fears or hates foreigners or foreign things. — n xenophobia (-fō'bi-ə) or (rare) xen'ophoby fear or hatred of foreigners and foreign things. — n pl xenophya (zen-of'i-ə; Gr xenophyēs strange in shape or nature; biol) elements of a shell or skeleton not secreted by the organism itself. — adj xenoplas'tic in experimental zoology, of or denoting transplantation in which transplant and host belong to the young germs of different species or genera. — n Xen'opus a genus of African aquatic frogs (see platanna). — n xenotime (zen'ō-tīm; Gr xenos strange, in error for kenos empty, vain, and timē honour, in reference to the fact that the mineral was at first thought to contain a new metal) yttrium phosphate, often containing small quantities of cerium, erbium and thorium, and an important source of these rare elements. — n Xenurus (zē-nū'rəs; Gr ourā tail) a genus of armadillos in which the tail is almost without plates. — adj xenū'rine. [Gr xenos (n) guest, host, stranger, (adj) strange, foreign] xenon zen'on or zē'non, n an element of zero valency (symbol Xe; atomic no 54), a heavy gas present in the atmosphere in the proportion of $1:17 \times 10^7$ by volume, and also a fission product. — xenon lamp a high-pressure lamp, containing traces of xenon, used in film projectors, high-speed photography, etc. [Ety as for xeno-]

Xenurus and xenurine. See under xeno-.

xerafin sher'ə-fēn or xeraphin -fēm, n a former silver coin of Goa. [Port] xeransis ... to ... xerasia. See under xero-.

Xeres hher'es, (obs) n sherry. [Sp, wine of Jerez (formerly Xeres)] xeric. See under xero-.

xero- zē-rō-, or before a vowel xer- zēr-, combining form denoting dry. — n xeran'sis a drying up. — n xeranthemum (-an'thi-məm; Gr anthemon flower) any plant of the Xeranthemum genus of plants of southern Europe, belonging to the thistle family; one species of these, also called everlasting. — adj xeran'tic drying up. — adj xerarch (zē'rärk; bot; Gr archē beginning) of a plant succession, starting on land where conditions are very dry. — n xerasia (zi-rā'si-ə) an abnormal or unhealthy dryness of the hair. — adj xē'ric dry, lacking in moisture; xerophytic. — n xerochasy (zi-rok'ə-si; bot, etc) dehiscence on drying. — n xeroderma (zē-rō-dûr'mə; Gr derma skin) or xeroder'mia a disease characterized by abnormal dryness of the skin and by abnormal, excessive growth of its horny layer. — adj xerodermat'ic, xeroder'matous or xeroder'mic. — adj xerograph'ic. — n xerog'raphy a non-chemical photographic process in which the plate is sensitized electrically and developed by dusting with electrically-charged fine powder. — n xeroma (-rō') xerophthalmia: — pl xerō'mas or xerō'mata. — n xē'romorph (-mōrf; Gr morphē form) a xerophyte. — adj xeromor'phic or xeromor'phous of parts of a plant, protected against excessive loss of water by thick cuticles, coatings of hairs and similar structural features. — n xerophagy (zi-rof'ə-ji; Gr phagein to eat) the eating of dry food, or of bread, vegetables and water, as a form of fast. — adj xerophilous (-of'il-əs; Gr philos loving) of a plant, tolerant of a very dry habitat. — n xeroph'ily adaptation to dry conditions. — n xērophthalmia (-of-thal'mi-ə; Gr ophthalmos eye) a dry lustreless condition of the conjunctiva due to deficiency of vitamin A in the diet. — n xē'rophyte (-fīt; Gr phyton plant) a plant able to inhabit places where the water supply is scanty, or where conditions, eg excess of salts, make it difficult to take in water. — adj xerophytic (-fit') able to withstand drought. — n xeroradiog'raphy X-ray photography by xerography. — n xerō'sis abnormal dryness, eg of the skin, mouth, eyes, etc. — n xerostoma (-os'tom-ə; Gr stoma mouth) or xerostō'mia excessive dryness of the mouth due to insufficient secretions. — n xerotes (zē'rō-tēz) xerosis. — adj xerotic (-rot') of bodily tissues, abnormally dry. — n xerotripsis (-trip'sis; Gr trīpsis, from trībein to rub) dry friction. [Gr xēros dry]

Xerox® zē'roks, n a registered trademark used in respect of copying machines operating a xerographic method of reproduction; a copy so produced. — vt to produce a copy by this method. [Ety as for xero-]

X-factor, X-height. See under X (symbol).

Xhosa kō'sə, -zə or hhō'sə, n a group of Bantu-speaking tribes from the Cape district of S Africa, formerly often known as Kaffirs; a member of one of these tribes; the language of these tribes. — Also Xo'sa. — adj Xho'san.

xi zī, ksī or ksē, n the fourteenth letter of the Greek alphabet (Ξ or ξ), corresponding to X; as a numeral $\xi' = 60$, $,\xi = 60\,000$.

Xian, short for Christian. See also under X (symbol).

xiph- zif- or xipho- zif-ō- or -ō-, combining form denoting sword. — n xiphihumeralis (-i-hū-mər-ā'lis) in vertebrates, a muscle leading from the xiphoid cartilage to the humerus. — adj and n xiphiplas'tral. — n xiphiplas'tron in chelonians, one of the plates forming the plastron, lying posterior to the hypoplastron. — n xiphister'num a process at the lower end of the sternum. — adj xiph'oid (anatom) sword-shaped; relating to or designating the xiphoid process or xiphisternum (also, when cartilaginous, known as xiphoid cartilage). — adj xiphoid'al. — n xiphop'agus (Gr pēgnynai to fix or fasten together) Siamese twins joined in the region of the xiphoid cartilage. — adj xiphopagic (-paj'ik) or xiphop'agous. — adj xiphophyllous (-ə-fil'əs; Gr phyllon leaf) with sword-shaped leaves. — n Xiphosura (-ō-sū'rə; formed irregularly from Gr ourā tail) an order of Arthropoda of which the only survivors are the king-crabs. — adj and n xiphosu'ran. [Gr xiphos a sword]

Xiphias zif'i-as, n the common swordfish genus, from which the family Xiphiidae is named. [Gr xiphias swordfish, from xiphos sword]

Xm abbrev: Christmas (see also X (symbol)).

Xmas eks'məs or kris'məs, n short form of Christmas (see also X (symbol)).

Xn abbrev: Christian (see also X (symbol)).

xoanon zō'ə-non, n a primitive statue, said to have fallen from heaven, orig of wood, later overlaid with ivory and gold: — pl xō'ana. [Gr xoanon, from xeein to carve]

Xosa. See Xhosa.

X-particle. See under X (symbol).

X-ray eks'-rā, n an electromagnetic ray of very short wavelength which can penetrate matter opaque to light-rays, produced when cathode rays impinge on matter, discovered by Röntgen in 1895. — Also adj. — n a photograph taken by X-rays. — vt to photograph or treat by, or otherwise expose to, X-rays. — characteristic X-rays secondary X-rays emitted when X-rays fall on matter, which contain monochromatic radiations that vary in wavelength according to the atoms from which they are scattered; X-ray astronomy a branch of astronomy using satellites or rockets to detect and measure X-ray emissions from stars, etc; X-ray crystallography the study of crystal structures as shown by their diffraction of X-rays; X-ray micrography the preparation, and study through the microscope, of radiographs obtained by means of X-rays; X-ray spectrum a wavelength or frequency diagram in which a series of lines indicate by their positions the particular X-rays emitted by a body as the result of cathode-ray bombardment; X-ray telescope a telescope designed to investigate the emission of X-rays from stars, etc; X-ray therapy the use of X-rays for medical treatment; X-ray tube a tube enclosing a vacuum, in which X-rays are emitted from a metal target placed obliquely opposite to an incandescent cathode whose rays impinge on the target. [X (symbol) after its unknown nature on discovery; translated from orig Ger term X-Strahlen (pl), Strahl a ray]

Xt abbrev: Christ (see also X (symbol)).

Xtian abbrev: Christian (see also X (symbol)).

xu sōō, n in the currency of Vietnam, (a coin of the value of) one-hundredth of a dong: — pl xu. [Viet, from Fr sou sou]

xylo- zī-lō-, or before a vowel xyl- zīl-, combining form denoting wood. — n xylem (zī'ləm; bot) woody tissue in trees and plants, usu consisting of vessels, tracheides and fibres, all with lignified walls, with some more or less lignified parenchyma, concerned in the conduction of aqueous solutions, with storage and with mechanical support of the plant. — n xy'lene $C_6H_4(CH_3)_2$, any of three dimethyl-benzenes, occurring in coal-tar but not separable by fractional distillation. — n xy'lenol a synthetic resin, $(CH_3)_2{\cdot}C_6H_3{\cdot}OH$, any of six monohydric phenols derived from xylenes. — adj xy'lic relating to xylem; designating any of six acids, derivatives of xylene. — n xy'litol a sweet crystalline alcohol obtained from xylose, that can be used as a sugar substitute. — n xylobal'samum (Gr balsamon the balsam tree) the dried twigs, or the wood, of the balm of Gilead tree. — n xy'locarp a hard and woody fruit, such as a coconut. — adj xylocarp'ous. — n xy'lochrome (Gr chrōma colour) a mixture of substances to which the colour of heartwood is due, including tannins, gums, and resins. — n xy'logen (-jen) xylem. — adj xylogenous (-loj'ən-əs; bot) growing on wood. — n xylography (zī-log'rə-fi) the art of engraving on wood. — n xyl'ograph an impression or print from a wood block; an impression of the grain of wood for surface decoration. — n xylog'rapher. — adj xylograph'ic or -al. — adj xy'loid woody, ligneous. — n xyloidin or xyloidine (zi-loi'din; Gr eidos form, appearance) an explosive like gun-cotton, prepared by the action of strong nitric acid on starch or woody fibre — pyroxylin, or a similar substance. — n xy'lol (L oleum oil) xylene. — n xylol'ogy the study of the structure of wood. — n xylō'ma in fungi, a sclerotium-like body which forms spores internally and does not put out branches which develop into sporophores: — pl xylō'mas or xylō'mata. — n xylom'eter an instrument for determining the specific gravity of wood. — adj xylon'ic designating an acid obtained by oxidizing xylose. — n xy'lonite or Xy'lonite® a non-thermosetting plastic of the nitrocellulose type. — n xylophagan (-lof'ə-gən; Gr phagein to eat) one of the Xyloph'aga, a genus of boring bivalves. — n xy'lophage (-fāj) an insect larva, mollusc, etc that eats or bores into wood. — adj xylophagous (-lof'ə-gəs) wood-eating. — adj xyloph'ilous fond of wood, living on wood. — n xy'lophone (Gr phōnē voice) a musical instrument consisting of a graduated series of wooden, or sometimes metal, bars, which are struck with wooden hammers; an instrument used to measure the elastic properties of wood. — adj xylophon'ic. — n xyloph'onist. — n Xylopia (-lō'pi-ə; Gr pikros bitter) a genus of trees and shrubs of the custard-apple family, natives of the tropics, chiefly in America. — n xylopyrog'raphy designs engraved on wood with a hot poker; the act of making such designs. — n xylorim'ba an extended xylophone combining the ranges of the *xylo*phone and the ma*rimba*. — n xy'lose a pentose found in many plants, also known as wood-sugar ($C_5H_{10}O_5$). — adj xylot'omous (Gr tomē a cut) of insects, wood-boring or wood-cutting. — adj xylotypograph'ic relating to, or printed from, wooden type. — n xylotypog'raphy. — n xy'lyl (-lil) any of the univalent radicals, C_8H_9, of the xylenes or their derivatives. [Gr xylon wood]

Xyris zī'ris, n a genus of sedge-like plants, usu with yellow flowers, of the family Xyridaceae (zir-i-dā'si-ē) and order Xyridales (-dā'lēz). — adj xyridā'ceous (-shəs) of the Xyridaceae. [Gr xyris a kind of iris]

The Greek alphabet, apart from its use as the official script in Greek-speaking areas, is of worldwide importance as a source of symbols used in all branches of science and mathematics. The equivalents in our alphabet given above are intended as a guide to transliteration and as an indication of the anglicized pronunciation of ancient Greek. We have not attempted to describe modern Greek pronunciation. See also Dictionary under digamma, episemon, koppa, sampi, san.

Roman numerals

I = 1 V = 5 X = 10 L = 50 C = 100 D = 500 M = 1000

From the above symbols the numbers are made up as follows: —

I	=	1	L	=	50
II	=	2	LI	=	51
III	=	3	LII, etc	=	52, etc
IV (or IIII, eg on clocks)	=	4	LX	=	60
V	=	5	LXI	=	61
VI	=	6	LXII, etc	=	62, etc
VII	=	7	LXX	=	70
VIII	=	8	LXXI	=	71
IX	=	9	LXXII, etc	=	72, etc
X	=	10	LXXX	=	80
XI	=	11	LXXXI	=	81
XII	=	12	LXXXII, etc	=	82, etc
XIII	=	13	XC	=	90
XIV	=	14	XCI	=	91
XV	=	15	XCII, etc	=	92, etc
XVI	=	16
XVII	=	17	C	=	100
XVIII	=	18	CC	=	200
XIX	=	19	CCC	=	300
XX	=	20	CCCC or CD	=	400
XXI	=	21	D (or IↃ)	=	500
XXII, etc	=	22, etc	DC (or IↃC)	=	600
XXX	=	30	DCC (or IↃCC)	=	700
XXXI	=	31	DCCC (or IↃCCC)	=	800
XXXII, etc	=	32, etc	CM (or DCCCC or IↃCCCC)	=	900
XL	=	40	M	=	1000
XLI	=	41	MM	=	2000
XLII, etc	=	42, etc	$\bar{V}^3$ (or IↃↃ)[1]	=	5000

Other letters also were used as numerals in medieval times (see Dictionary). For additional information about medieval methods of writing numerals, see below.

1. The symbol Ↄ, known as the apostrophus, might be repeated one or more times after IↃ, each Ↄ making the number ten times greater, as IↃↃ = 5000, IↃↃↃ = 500 000. A number of this type might be multiplied by two by adding (in front) as many C's as there were Ↄ's in the number, eg CCIↃↃ = 10 000, CCCCIↃↃↃ = 1 000 000.

2. The symbols I, V, X, L, C, D, M are still used today. In the Middle Ages, and also in much later times, methods of writing numerals were common which are found neither in the Roman period nor in the present century. Some are noted below.

3. In the Middle Ages and later, a line was placed above a symbol representing a number 1000 times greater, as $\bar{X}$ = 10 000. $|\bar{X}|$ and $|X|$ were variant methods of expressing 1 000 000.

4. In the Middle Ages and later, and still in medical usage, numerals could be written lower case, and j was often substituted for final i.

5. In the Middle Ages and later, Ↄ appears with the same meaning as D, and there is sometimes a small version of the apostrophus. To take at random an example of the latter, the third volume of John Ray's Historia Plantarum, is dated clↄ Iↄ CCIV — that is 1704.

Physical constants

c speed of light in vacuo, $2{\cdot}997\,925 \times 10^{8}$ metres per second ($m{\cdot}s^{-1}$).

e electron charge, $1{\cdot}602\,192 \times 10^{-19}$ coulomb.

g standard acceleration of gravity, 9·806 65 metres per second per second ($m{\cdot}s^{-2}$). (At Greenwich, g = 9·811 83 metres per second per second.)

G gravitational constant, $6{\cdot}664 \times 10^{-11}$ $N{\cdot}m^{2}{\cdot}kg^{-2}$.

h Planck('s) constant, the constant in the expression for the quantum of energy, $6{\cdot}626\,196 \times 10^{-34}$ J·s.

$\hbar$ h-bar, Dirac's constant, $\frac{h}{2\pi}$ (Planck's constant divided by 2π), the unit in which electron spin is measured.

m_e the mass of an electron at rest, $9{\cdot}109\,558 \times 10^{-31}$ kg.

m_p the mass of a proton at rest, $1.672\,614 \times 100^{-27}$ kg.

m_n the mass of a neutron at rest, $1{\cdot}674\,92 \times 10^{-27}$ kg.

N_A Avogadro('s) number, constant, number of molecules in a mole of any substance, $6{\cdot}022\,52 \times 10^{23}$ per mole.

Speed of sound at sea level at 0°C, 331·7 metres per second.
Standard temperature and pressure (stp), 0°C and 101 325 $N{\cdot}m^{-2}$.
Standard volume of ideal gas, $2{\cdot}241\,36 \times 10^{-2} m^{3}{\cdot}mol^{-1}$ at stp.
Melting point of ice, 0°C or 273·15 K.

The table reads in both directions, showing equivalent Celsius and Fahrenheit temperatures; it is based on whole number Celsius temperatures.

Where whole number Fahrenheit temperatures occur, they and their Celsius equivalents are shown in bold type. Approximate Celsius equivalents for other whole number Fahrenheit temperatures can be worked out — eg 54°F will be between 12°C and 13°C, but nearer 12°C. It is in fact 12.2°C.

Exact Celsius equivalents for Fahrenheit temperatures can be found by using the equation: −32, × 5, ÷ 9. For example 54°F − 32 = 22 × 5 = 110 ÷ 9 = 12.2°C.

ow	"	mount, frown, sour	mownt, frown, sowr
oi	"	toy, buoy, soil	toi, boi, soil

Stress

In words of more than one syllable, the syllable with the main accent is shown by a stress mark following that syllable, both in the respellings (eg äf'ter, bi-gin') and in entries in bold-faced type (eg af'ters, beginn'er).

Note the difference in pronunciation, as shown by the position of the stress mark, between blessed' (blest) and bless'ed (bles'id), refined' (re-find') and refin'edly (ri-fin'id-li).

Vowels in unaccented syllables

Neutral vowels in unaccented syllables are usually shown by ə (schwa) eg el'ə-mənt, in'fənt, ran'dəm, pre'shəs (precious), nā'chər (nature).

In certain cases, they are more exactly represented by i eg ē'vil, bi-hōld, bles'id, man'ij, di-ment'.

Vowels followed by r

In certain accents, for example in Scots, Irish, General American, r is pronounced wherever it occurs in the spelling and this is the form adopted in the dictionary.

In certain other accents, for example Received Pronunciation or what is sometimes called the BBC accent, it is pronounced only when it occurs before a vowel. Elsewhere the following rules apply:

ār	is pronounced as			eə	ör	is pronounced as		ö or öə
är	"	"	"	ä	o͞or	"	"	"	o͞oə
er	"	"	"	iə	ūr	"	"	"	ūə
ėr	"	"	"	eə	ûr	"	"	"	ûə
īr	"	"	"	īə	owr	"	"	"	owə

An apostrophe is used to mark such pronunciations as t'h (representing the sound of two separate consonants, t followed by h) to distinguish this from the sound th (as in thin). It is also used in words such as timbre (tɛ̃br'), maître (metr') and humble (ɑ̃'bl') in the pronunciation of which a final ə (eg tɛ̃brə) is possible.

Vowels in bold-faced entries

The long vowels ā, ē, ī, ō, ū, have the values ā, ē, ī, ō, ū; y is to be pronounced ī.
